About This Game

Welcome to the laboratory

The game mechanics are simple but fascinating. Various objects consistently drop out from the test tube connected to the bioreactor. You must take them and place them on the playing field. When three same objects (or two same and one special) are side by side, they evolve into a more advanced form! This is repeated several times until you get the most perfect zombies. Place the objects strategically: if there are no free cells on the field, you lose, because the zombies violate the conditions of their existence and will break out uncontrollably, cause it's too crowded in your laboratory.

In the name of chaos!

We remind you that in this game you are a mad scientist who wants to plunge the world into chaos! Doesn't it remind anyone? In any case, when you get the most advanced zombies, they go to the big world to wreak havoc in one of the four areas of human life. As your minions progress, the chaos scales will fill up. Note that if one of the scales exceeds others by 30%, the society will notice that something is going wrong and you will be discovered. So try to keep balance. As soon as all the chaos scales are filled, you win! However, you can continue the game even after this significant moment!

The tutorial doesn't explain much of anything and there seem to be no goals or quests. There also doesn't seem to be a way to get it out of fullscreen mode. You just place zombie pieces in fullscreen and try to get matches of three? I have no clue how to get the created zombies out of the lab and into society. It could be amusing as a matching\placement game except there are randomly moving zombie wolves that eat your placed pieces. It is, however, bug free. So it's not horrible for what it is, and I can see it being a good idle clicker, but not in full screen. I am giving it a thumbs up because for the sale price (I got it for $3 in the GameChain bundle on sale) you can get a few hours of amusement from it. I'd love to be able to window it and make it small so I can play while I work and have a clear explanation of what I'm trying to accomplish and have small goals to reach as I try to hit the "main quest".. Very simple matching puzzle game. No tutorial or explanations. It froze 20 minutes in and I had to shut it down.
